BONUS PHRASE!

The apple tree originated from a place called Kazakhstan, which is located in Central Asia. It found its way across Europe and reached the taste buds of a French explorer named Samuel de Champlain.

When Champlain left his home to explore in the early 17th century, he brought the apple with him (I mean, he couldn't leave it behind!). When he and these new settlers tried to grow them in Canadian soil, they were delighted to see how well they flourished! They found that the areas most suited to growing apples were along Lake Ontario's North shore and Prince Edward County.

All the pioneer settlers planted apple orchards as they arrived in, what was then, Upper Canada. They relied on apples for fresh eating and delicious cooking and baking.
